Foojay.io is the central resource for Java professionals - a platform for daily insights, curated news and community collaboration built around OpenJDK. Now rebuilt for speed, openness and reach.

About Friends Of OpenJDK

What is Foojay.io?

Foojay.io is the integrated dashboard for all things Java. It is a central resource for daily information, curated highlights and categorised reference materials.

It is a place for Friends Of OpenJDK and a community platform bringing together Java professionals everywhere - from independent developers to enterprise teams and Java User Groups worldwide.

In September 2026 Foojay moved to a new, fast, open-source site. Same URLs, same archive - with a new home for your brand.

Sponsorship funds go directly back to the community – website maintenance, platform improvements, podcast production, events and swag.

The New Foojay – Built for Sponsors

Faster, rebuilt from the ground up

Foojay now runs on Hugo as a static site: same URLs, the full 2,250+ article archive, much faster pages - so your content and banners load instantly.

Read counts you can trust

Every article shows a first-party read count - no cookies or ad-blocker blind spots. 13.8M historic reads were carried over.

Accessible to every developer

Built to WCAG 2.2 AA: keyboard, screen-reader and dark-mode friendly - sponsor banners included.

Podcasts you can read

100 episodes now carry a full on-page transcript - more searchable, quotable reach for every featured episode.

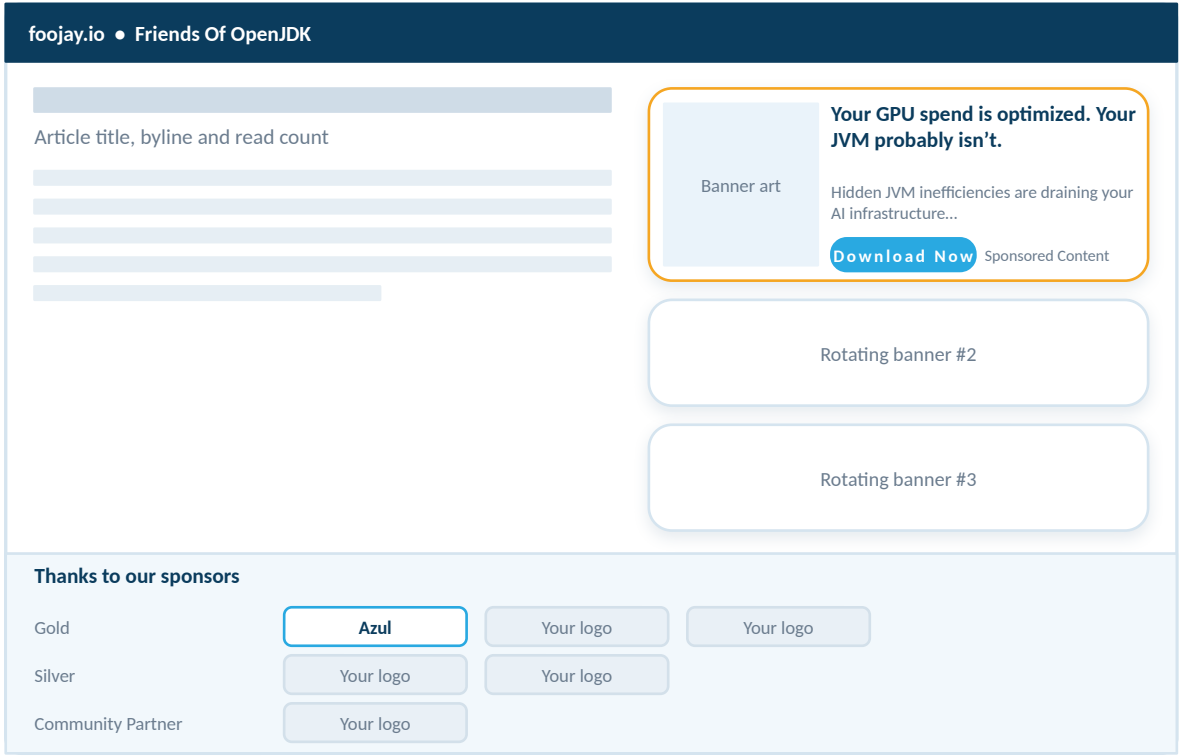

Always up to date

Meetups from Java User Groups worldwide are pulled into our calendar automatically, alongside conferences added by the community. Our directory lists 102 JUGs.

Publishing is a pull request

Sponsor authors submit in Markdown or AsciiDoc (Mermaid diagrams supported); automated checks run before review. Canonical links keep SEO credit for cross-posts.
